THE SAJMUN TIMES

South Sudan and Sudan decided to handle matters in their own manner of meagre capabilities and means...

Mr. Modi says, "The rise in population is the result of orthodox ideas and polygamy is the immoral thing."

This year at SAJMUN, we simulated a setting which enabled delegates to explore the intricacies of geopolitics and international relations and provided an experience that gave the delegates a valuable insight into the functioning of the United Nations and its subsidiary organs. We further accentuated this enriching experience for delegates by simulating an environment that propels the use of diplomacy, hones leadership qualities, promotes consensus building, necessitates quality research and above all- laid the foundation for the eventual transformation of an Indian civilian into a global citizen.

With a collaboration with the United Nations Information Centre for India and Bhutan, we ensured that the emphatic voice of the youth does not go unheard, rather it successfully reaches the highest echelons of our society- the United Nations itself.

In SAJMUN 2017 we organized seven committees which aimed to highlight diverse topics, the world finds most essential to discuss, ranging from matters of historical importance to current issues, the world faces. The committees did not only test the delegates' research, diplomacy and oratory skills but also provided them with an unparalleled educational experience. They displayed their talent of diplomacy and innovativeness at a level where they faced immense competition. In our annual MUN conference this time, we had more than 280 delegates and 20 schools with talent meeting diplomacy and enthusiasm reaching its acme. We hope to give you an insight to the same biting and gripping extravaganza with our official newsletter – "THE SAJMUN TIMES". Enjoy the read.

THE SAJMUN TIMES

The major objective of any Model United Nations is to lead the thought process of its participants from narrow nationalism to wide globalism by providing them with a kaleidoscopic view. Our young leaders are free to put forth their views across the number of issues presented before them, giving them the opportunity to explore the complexities of geopolitics and International relations. For the students, of the students and by the students, is our motto that further pushes us to deliberate their views in order to see the world at the represented pace.

-Kavita Ojha Tewari, HOD, Social Science

My vision was to make SAJMUN a forum where delegates achieve an unparalleled learning experience that motivates them to take the world to new heights. I envision SAJMUN as a platform where every delegate, whether inspired by the Secretariat, the EB, his/her peers or even a moderated caucus on a particular issue in committee, takes the opportunity and passionately pursues it. After two days of intense debating and ruminating, I can say that what I envisaged came true.

-Kushagra Agarwal, Secretary General

We had diplomacy and deliberations at their best as the delegates used the power of their words to debate over issues from all over the world. From tracking the Panama Papers in Latin America to the Civil War in South Sudan, from the crisis in the Middle East to rewriting history in Dunkirk, from questioning the legality of Capital Punishments to debating the establishment of a Uniform Civil Code in India. These two days, we indeed conceived, concurred and convinced.

-Riddhiraj Singh Sehgal, Director General

INTERNATIONAL PRESS

About the International Press at SAJMUN 2017:

The international press serves the role of Press Corps at SAJMUN 2017 and aims to deliver a first rate newsletter for the reading of the delegations and the Secretariat. Each reporter has investigated specific committees and council activities. Where articles have been disseminated to all councils several times throughout the conference in daily newsletters produced by the International press and the Secretariat.

From the Executive Board:

For the International Press at SAJMUN 2017, we had exceptional reporters, photographers and caricaturists alike. The photographers, in particular was a mixed bag full of those with raw talent and those with cutting edge skills. The reporters, they were hard working and the amount of reports I had to read before choosing what to put in this newsletter was simply overwhelming. The caricaturists were amazing as well. The combined effort of all the IP members is reflected in this newsletter and while all of the participants still have a long way to go, they all did shine at this conference.

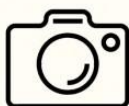

-Yash Agarwal, Editor in Chief

In a conventional news-agency simulation, the reporters would typically adopt the perspectives and styles of classic editorial reporters. At SAJMUN, we had decided to simulate a form of an associated press, in-house from United Nations that would have, despite all liberties of thought and expression, an unbiased fashion of reporting.

Therefore, IPD members were not supposed to write in-character for any news agency of nativity, but as International Press. All reporters and photographers have been part of a multi-national, International Press Corps. The reporters exhibited exemplified documentary propensity and sterling scrutinising skills during the simulation hours. The reporters met our premier standards and climacteric deadlines with acute robustness. It was, if I may say, an extreme pleasure to serve as a member of the Executive panel of the International Press at SAJMUN 2017.

-Prithvi Gupta, IP Head for Reporting

INTERNATIONAL PRESS

IP has always been the committee of my preference in an MUN, and the fact that I was able to meet people like me, photographers like me, people with real talent in photography was indeed the best thing I could get from an MUN. The photographers were dedicated, diligent and best of all, true to their camera. It was an honour to serve as an EB member this SAJMUN.

JOINT CRISIS COMMITTEE: ALLIES

Agenda: The Battle of Dunkirk.

The past serves as a prelude to the present. History repeats itself. It's the year 1940. The month of May. It's an era of doom, an age of chaos. A period of darkness; a future that seems to be inevitably doomed. Within the confines of these four walls, is a group of 15, in which is vested the power to change the course of the world.

The council, headed by the esteemed British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill and the equally important French Head of The State, Paul Reynaud is in a state of confusion, apprehension and chaos. While our valiant men dangle between life and death, evacuation is urgent. It's the need of the hour. A necessity. A compulsion. A sole option, and the only resort.

The council seemed to have been lacking direction, at first. The executive board struggled to develop a sense of purpose in the delegates, but participation was at its least and progress was snail-slow. The members seemed helpless. The Nazi army was continuously closing in; the BEF was stranded and ensnared with the enemy at one end and the horrors of the sea at the other.

What followed was a vigorous exchange of directives between both the cabinets. As crises were launched at the cabinet with the rapidity of a forest fire, the members seemed to be gaining momentum- and an understanding of action. Prime Minister Winston Churchill took the lead, along with assistance from René Prioux, and the duo seemed to be well versed with war strategy. This aided the process of saving our men. However, the Allied cabinet, ironically enough, didn't see many internal alliances- of the 15 members, most couldn't keep up with the fast pace and others who did manage, were lone rangers. This, however, didn't mean that the International Press saw intra-cabinet rivalries; in fact, it was quite astonishing to see almost every member participating in formulating directives during the informal sessions. This seemed to please the Executive Board as well. The Supervisor looked into the directives, and ensured that each individual participated. Soon, the cabinet saw a bifurcation of sorts. It was divided into 4 sub committees, each vested with the responsibility of covering certain areas of action in their directives. Ideas were put forth, and were welcomed. War prostitutes, spies, regiment deployment- the committee witnessed all of it. Some even suggested poisoning the food and water supply of the enemy. The council saw some tensions with the United States of America as well, following a word-vomit by Winston Churchill that made things ugly. The guest delegate of USA took the committee by a storm and put forth 3 non-negotiable demands covering the areas of trade, financial assistance and land ownership post world war 2, and of course, a formal apology from the British Prime Minister. Following two days of gripping debate and a furious exchange of directives, the committee finally came to an end. Later, it was declared that the Nazi Cabinet had emerged victorious. One cannot, however, overlook the fact that the delegates acted with utmost urgency and efficiency and in totality, where proficient enough to handle bolts from the blue, from men dressed in brown.

JOINT CRISIS COMMITTEE: ALLIES

-IP Team

From the Executive Board:

Allies defended their bloc, 8 crises were introduced and they kept upping their ante by the hour, most of them were first timers but then to. Axis won, but we fought to our very best level. The agenda a little complex, feebly good and inexperienced. The committee was mundane in the beginning, once they got direction they gave a tough fight to the axis. The executive board recommends more foresight, innovation and practicality, while tackling bolts from the blue from the men dressed in brown.

JOINT CRISIS COMMITTEE: AXIS

Agenda: The Battle of Dunkirk.

The meeting of the Cabinet began with the Nazi anthem with the members giving respect to the sacred song. Following the roll call, the committee started with speeches related to the condition of the German military troops surrounding one-third of the French army and the British Expedition Forces on 26th May, 1940.

The German army general Von Kleist declared Italy to be a hypocrite nation. He said that Italy would support any side of the war till the time that side benefits Italy. The minister of armaments and ammunition supported Von Kleist in his opinion. This statement of General Von Kleist spread and soon an Italian representative got to know about it. The president of Italy sent a message to the Nazi Cabinet that Italy would no longer support Axis Powers in this war after being insulted by the German army general.

Following this, general Von Kleist and Fritz Todt decided to resign from the Nazi Cabinet due to their misjudgment of the intentions of Italy and due to their mistake which lead to the loss of Italy's alliance to Axis Powers. Their resignation was declared void by the Nazi Cabinet and the Cabinet's decision to impeach Von Kleist and Fritz Todt was also refused in the following resolution.

Later on, the Halt order by Adolf Hitler was lifted unanimously by the Cabinet and the German forces started moving towards Dunkirk to eliminate the enemy forces which they had surrounded. Due to the Cabinet's effective planning and extremely efficient use of powers, the German u-boats had surrounded and captured over the sea routes near Dover and Portsmouth. This action of the German navy prompted the British evacuation ships to evacuate the Strait of Dover and return to the British territory. The dilligence and efficiency of the Nazi Generals lead to the defeat of the American navy ships in the English Channel leaving the English helpless.

After the plan be was a success, the victory of the Nazis seemed inevitable. The French forces and The BEF in Dunkirk were stuck and the Nazi Panzer division successfully eliminated them . The victory of the Nazis was soon declared and and the Allied forces were defeated.

JOINT CRISIS COMMITTEE: AXIS

From the Executive Board:

In absolute sense I would say this cabinet is hard-working, diligent and focused. The agenda is inexhaustible insubstansive matter. The committee discussed the fine points of the agenda throughout. This cabinet was learning to learn throughout. To sum up the achievements of this cabinet, they achieved the feats of a lion in the body of a sheep. The entire EB of the JCC wishes them luck in any future undertaking. "For we shall win, if our cause is just and up be the heavens and in God we trust" ending his review.

EMERGENCY MEETING OF THE ARAB LEAGUE, 2011

Agenda: The Arab Spring.

“It all started in December, 2010, when a twenty-six year old fruit seller in rural Tunisia, fed up with a life of harassment and extortion by venal government officials, doused himself in the paint thinner, struck a match, and unwittingly ignited the Arab Spring.”

The committee commenced with the General speakers list, the first speaker being the Head of state of Libya, Colonel Muammar Gaddafi, who expressed his disappointment in various news agencies, that had unnecessarily fuelled the Arab Spring. Mr. Bashar Al Assad, the head of state of Syrian Arab Republic publicly displayed his prejudice against the western powers that had aimed to destabilize his government. He further aided to his cause, emphasizing on the fact how he had not violated human rights, and that it was all a media-propaganda. Egypt discussed the core causes of the Arab Spring in a straightforward manner, enlisting the things that the countries needed to come forward to a consensus on. The heads of Reuters and Amnesty International stated that their sites were authentic, on which Libya commented, that majority of media-sites reported hypothetically false news, which consisted of opinions, and not facts.

Syrian Arab Republic put forth an emotional note, so as to how the Arab League kept them together, against all attempts by “UNCLE SAM”, a hypothetical name referring to the United States of America. The committee discussed various ways of controlling the crowds via peaceful methods, wherein Djibouti put forth his views, about using pellet guns and teargas on the protesters. This triggered questions from the Executive Board, so as to if Djibouti knew that “teargas had been rendered illegal under the BWC & CWC” and that pellet guns could blind a person, on which he replied that pellet guns and teargas were better than AK47s. The committee became highly diplomatic when Syria shared some sympathy with Col. Gaddafi, on the account that both were leaders, who had been accused of something which they had not done, and received applause from the dictatorships that were present at the headquarters. Out of the blue, came a presidential statement by Colonel Gaddafi, severing all ties with states of Djibouti because of the fabricated remarks and Tunisia for going back on their stance. The committee witnessed a number of presidential statements on both the days.

What seemed like a “constant” committee changed its façade in the face of crises. The communication lines had ben closed, and the crisis contained intel about Syria using up money for “Humanitarian assistance” by Algeria and Russia, so as to lure the unemployed people into supporting his regime, via a rally, the agenda being-“I STAND WITH ASSAD”.

EMERGENCY MEETING OF THE ARAB LEAGUE, 2011

The crises went on for long, till the time the committee took a turn from the highways of plain talk, when Libya cited suspicion so as to whether or not to trust the Arab league in a way that Libya thrown out, and then suspiciously called back. Syria said that they would now go on a state of war if they were not compensated for their loss, indirectly blaming Libya for the change in stance. Russia was asked the question by the Executive Board, so as to why it was taking responsibility of the wrong financial decision by Algeria. The committee surprisingly, almost came to a consensus to interrogate the Head officials of the Arab League, about the authenticity of the crisis.

The working paper was tabled three times, a resolution by Syria and Egypt was passed. The committee ended on a solemn note, successfully, on having solved the Arab Spring, and retained the sovereignty of the states of the league.

-Adwiti Singh, Vice President

From the Executive Board:

The second day was much more fruitful than the first one. The issues were discussed from a diplomatic point of view instead of the blame game that was being played on the first day. While the first day was characterised primarily by crises and intriguing deliberations over multiple issues ranging from the sovereignty of Syria to disposing of Gaddafi's government in Syria, the second day witnessed constructive discussions and immense paperwork with multiple communiques, working papers, two press releases and a draft resolution. The committee also got into the intricacies of decades old agreements, which made it even more interesting. References to International Laws, UN Charter, The Arab Charter and innumerable treaties and conventions made the discussions more and more legal. The committee succeeded in solving the issue at hand from a diplomat's point of view, maintaining the sanctity of the committee.

ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL AFFAIRS COUNCIL

Agenda: Cross Border Tax evasion with special reference to Panama papers.

Tax evasion may or may not make countries swim in pool full of cashes. "It was calm as well as not at all oblivious indeed a fruitful and attractive committee". A day with ample of enthusiasm and numbers of speeches to be presented. The committee chair briefed the delegates about the committee he focused on points that seemed to be a bit confusing for the delegates. After this briefing session started the roll call each and every delegate was recognised with a strong and commanding voice which was full off pride and enthusiasm. Delegate of Canada questioned if person privilege was allowed, chair answered the question vigorously and elaborated that it was quiet awkward asking to go the washroom infront of 50 people and then surely after that when they gossip" he is the one who wanted to go to Washroom." The first GSL had started as it was the very first one there were very least number of delegates participating. Delegate of Rwanda raised the motion on methods of money laundering the rest 3 motions were failed but this motion was passed with huge majority. Rwanda stated that though Rwanda is a underdeveloped country but resources such as tax evasion really dont make any sort of profit as such. Delegate of France stated a commendable topic which made everyone applause " that this topic brings a pool full of cash and developed nations are swimming and have no fear of drowning." As the delegate of Saudi Arabia was speaking the chair basically got pleased to stop it in between and question whether she really knows what the topic is all about, as she started her speech raising topics which really didn't intend to tell any thing related to the agenda. The vice chair mentioned the importance of the agenda and explained that money laundering means smuggling across borders illegally or we can say transportation of money or goods without the legal permissions of the authority. Next GSL was passed delegate of Angola discussing offshore committees are the committees who are illegal and executed the difference between tax evasion and money laundering are entirely different. As the delegate of Azerbaijan was stating a nonsense speech using his electronic device the chair asked him to come and explain the topic on the podium his heart was somewhat failed as words that came out from chair's mouth seemed like an arrow that went through his heart he turned pale while standing and asked to excuse himself. After this incident the vice chair announced that no delegate is allowed to completely read and speak they are only allowed to have a glance. United States of America asked if a joint crisis could take place the chair didn't deny the point but said that ECOFIN is a committee entirely different from committees like AIPPM AND HRC where crisis is one of the most interesting and favoured point among the delegates whereas in ECOFIN it is the most boring one, crisis is basically presented and is followed by updates which are infinite in number. Hence the session ended, having two moderated caucus in between. It was a lavish committee full of resolutions and speeches to be formulated it was indeed one of the most significant and scientific topics.

-Meha Shukla, Reporter, Seth Anandram Jaipuria School

From the Executive Board:

The ECOFIN is the Second committee of the United Nations General Assembly. The agenda for this committee was cross border tax evasion with special emphasis on panama papers. Initially the committee was quite monotonous but as the committee moved on the delegates were full of enthusiasm and went on debate upon the sub agendas. The agenda at hand was of great importance to the International community, something that the World is facing. Well to be honest once the delegates were made to understand what the subtopics and the pragmatic theories of the agenda were they understood the concepts and grasped the dynamics of the committee pretty well. All in all the delegates were very cooperative and coordinated with each other to ensure that a committee which was silent at first converted themselves into money mongering monsters throwing around economics terms as of its their daily cup of tea.

UNITED NATIONS HUMAN RIGHTS COUNCIL

Agenda: Capital Punishment with Reference to the International Law on Human Rights.

"Just as treasures are uncovered from the earth, so virtue appears from good deeds, and wisdom appears from a pure and peaceful mind. To walk safely through the maze of human life, one needs the light of wisdom and the guidance of virtue."

-Buddha

While the death penalty is not prohibited by the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR) or any other virtually universal international treaty, there are a number of instruments in force with fewer state parties that do abolish capital punishment, the most important treaty provision related to death penalty being the Article 6 of the ICCPR.

At the commencement of the committee session 1, there was hustle-bustle all around and restlessness prevailed in the committee but with the strike of a hammer by the President, all the noise subsided. There was a roll call taken after which began the important discussion on whether "Capital Punishment" must be abolished or mustn't be with each delegate putting forth his/her views. The delegate of Russia could be seen suggesting all the delegates to be more solution-oriented while lobbying which indeed encouraged most delegates to come up with some of the most cerebral solutions. One could see the delegate of the United States of America being targeted the most by the other delegates. To every question posed to most delegates, one could hear bluestocking retorts. Countries like the United States of America and Ghana spoke against capital punishment while countries like the United Kingdom and Slovenia spoke in favour of it.

The delegates expressed themselves indubitably and gallantly. Diplomacy could be seen distinctly. There were multitudinous Formal-Informals raised and a few Informal-Formals to get the committee streamlined. The Speaker's List was opulent with speakers throughout the committee.

There was an undefinable bridge between the delegates and the Executive Board which could be seen in the candid suggestions the Executive Board made and the positive way in which the delegates promised to improve.

The second day had the same eagerness, zeal and enthusiasm amongst the delegates as was there the day before. The logistics were an essential part of the committee and were indeed the most active part of the committee. A lot of speeches and heated debates followed the Speaker's List. With 2 Formal-Informals, with one being attributed to the discussion on working papers, the committee continued. As it is said, all that starts well, ends well and so happened to the committee. The committee ended on a positive note, with the intricacies of the scenario well acknowledged and leaving no facet of the agenda undiscussed. A 33 clause resolution was adopted by consensus hence, doing justice to the gravity of the deliberations and the responsibility of the Human Rights Council. The delegates had a smile of satisfaction on their faces and the world had, in faith, become more humane then onwards.

-Harleen Narang, Seth Anandram Jaipuria School

From the Executive Board:

The agenda of the committee was on capital punishment. Initially, the delegates seemed to be unclear on the agenda but later, unexpectedly got to the right track. China and the US had no scruples about having capital punishment in practice while others, who didn't were struggling to speak their mind. It was a great experience owing to the great agenda. The delegates were high spirited and were fighting for their rights. Life imprisonment was a major topic for discussion along with the right to live and the morality behind death penalty.

UNITED NATIONS SECURITY COUNCIL

Agenda: Situation in South Sudan.

Given the very penetrating nature of the UN Security Council, the International community received various stances from the governments.

The functionaries were stupefied by the differentiated crises of South Sudan, the most prominent of them being "The refugee crisis of South Sudan". The Executive Board received various stances including, in its ambit, opinions ranging from crushing the political crisis in South Sudan, hence suppressing the refugee emigration or to embrace the refugees and provide them with at least minimal daily commodities, in a bid to help them survive the period of adversity.

Initially, the delegates seemed to be bemused but later they came up with such statements and debates which completely took the Executive Board by surprise. Given the nationally opinionated and extremely befuddled debate, the nations of South Sudan and Sudan decided to handle matters in their own manner of meagre capabilities and means. Grain shortage, immigration, lack of social security, abuse of human rights were some of the agendas discussed in their collective agreement-"Agreement 2.0" The Refugee crisis, so as to say, had been an agenda which had been met with full vigour and in which was displayed the highest standards of lexical propensity. In the midst of all this chaos, were seen the P5, united. A unity, rarely seen, in world history. The P5 voted for the need of removing the barricading of routes of transport for food and commodities. They vouched for militant action (if necessary) to rid the country of guerrillas present in the country, thus putting forth a solution to majority of the issues. On reviewing the Vice-President, she told the International Press "The delegates remained staunch on their stances, their lobbying and diplomatic propensity had stupefied the EB."

-Prithvi Gupta, IP Head for Reporting

From the Executive Board:

The agenda for the committee was fairly sensitive. The committee would not be termed as passive at all, rather energetic, it would be. The first timers were extremely creative in their stances, and were ready to go to war for the same. Negotiations were negligible. The delegates had adapted to the Rules of Procedure easily. The committee viewed everything: From failing working papers to collaborating Sudans. In all, the committee, according to the EB's point of view was a success.

ALL INDIA POLITICAL PARTIES MEET

Agenda: Uniform Civil Code in India with Special Reference to Triple Talaq

As soon as the committee session commenced with the Article 44 being bombarded by a Marathi Cynic, the tongue in cheek comments by Mr. Arun Jaitley, began to fly out of his mouth. Moreover, Mr. Jaitley went into logic over the criterion of speaking Parliamentarians instead of representatives and very conveniently, the agenda drifted from Triple Talaq to the logic of delegates being representative and not Parliamentarians, Mr. Jaitley, whose claim stated his "logic" over gender, that Muslim religion was a retardation for women improvement, juxtaposes his claim on a secular, unified democracy INDIA and was unexpectedly passed for a worthy delegate. Further, Mr. Owaissi, in the midst of his panegyrics about secularism, discriminated between Hindus and Muslims over having a goat beard. AIPPM is a committee free of antithesis, indeed. A session of blame and non-consensus game was played like pros, resulting the EB to keep on waiting with an eager eye over the concurment of the delegates. Moving on, very easily Madam Mufti mistook the discussion of 'Special Marriage Act' for 'same gender relationships' in place of secularism. Limping behind came another Islam defender with a topic of morality of polygamy, on which Mr Modi stated the rise in population being a result of all such orthodox ideas and stressed over the fact of marriage of many women to a same man being the most immoral thing.

On the other hand, Uma Bharti the resolute lady, being a text savvy haunted female, picked up her laptop and the 'logic' of 'CHANGE' in her fluent hindi along with rhetoric and predilection towards Premchand. Slowly, the civil code war changed from logic to intellect.

Surprisingly, Mr Tharoor refused to face the heat of the situation and Mr Lalu Prasad Yadav out of blue spoke fluent English, devoid of Bhojpuri touch.

Eventually, the very Muslim lady, madam Mufti, affirmed the Quran was written by Allah, moral shaming representatives for lack of knowledge or perhaps lack of courage.

-Shivika Singh, Reporter, MR Jaipuria

ALL INDIA POLITICAL PARTIES MEET

From the Executive Board:

It was an interesting committee. Mr Arun Jaitley and Modi kept effective points. The delegates were well researched. Every first timer spoke well. Kaivalya Anand Bajpai, speaker of the Lok Sabha at SAJMUN '16 came back temporarily as the guest speaker. Triple Talaq, being a very sensitive issue was handled with kid's gloves. According to the EB, UCC shouldn't be there, because it would damage the cultural diversity but triple talaq ruthlessly hurts equality and women rights which are promised by the Indian constitution.

CARICATURES

Honestly, I've only done a couple of MUNs since they were introduced in our city. I consider myself as more of an art person and seeing that all the MUNs happening around me had opportunities for writers and photographers to express themselves, I felt like there should be an opportunity for the artistic ones too, in an MUN. With the help of the secretariat and the teachers, my vision for a special art department at SAJMUN came true. Though the caricaturists were few in number, they were very diligent and talented. I wish them the best for their future endeavours in art!

-Gaurisha Gupta, IP Head for Caricature

TEACHERS' REVIEWS

"I really feel honoured. Everything was very well managed, indeed. It was very similar to the MUN we have at M.R.Jaipuria in Lucknow so we felt right at home. The secretary general was very modest and down to Earth."

-Dr. Preeti Singh, MUN Coordinator,
M.R. Jaipuria, Lucknow

"This is my first experience and I really loved it. The students were very enthusiastic towards the concept of MUNs and I have to agree, the hype is justified. I am looking forward to be a part of the next SAJMUN as well."

-Anshu Sethi, Teacher,
St. Mary's Convent, Kanpur

"This is the first time that my students have come to an MUN conference. The ceremony was extremely well managed and the delegates were high spirited and exceptionally well researched."

-Taiba, Teacher,
Virendra Swarup School, Kanpur

"First of all, I really feel honoured. Seeing all the children engrossed in their work so arduously pleased me. Secondly, the conference was very well organized and there were no shortcomings."

-Rita Yadav, Teacher,
Jain International, Kanpur

PARTICIPANTS

From Delegate Affairs:

We'd like to extend our thanks to every single participant who took the time and effort to come to SAJMUN and make it bigger and better this year. We hope that the participants had an enriching experience and to see you next year as well!
